

Personal Statement

What could be more fun and interesting than communication with children? Who would argue that children are a source of inspiration, joy and fun? Their laughter and happy eyes can remain indifferent very few people, while their tears can bring unspeakable torment. Therefore, treating the kids, giving them the opportunity to enjoy life, is the highest value, including me! Since childhood, I dreamed of becoming a pediatrician. Convinced of the correctness of my career choice, I tried and am still trying to make my every step in order to become a pediatrician as soon as possible.

At the age of _____, my family and I immigrated to _____ from the _____ where I entered a community college and obtained an AA. Shortly after I moved to _____, where right after graduation in _____ I received a job of PA. Two years later while still working at the hospital, I unexpectedly saw an ad on the newspaper seeking for a bilingual PA. It was a position as a provider for a pediatric office. As a result, this work based on interaction with children provided me not only with a lot of pleasure, but also with additional experience necessary.

In particular, my work at the hospital was very rewarding and afforded me the opportunity to work under the supervision of doctors who gave me much encouragement and support. Although the majority of the patients were adults, often I had the opportunity to work with children. The experience working as a PA in pediatrics was one of the main motivation for me to become a pediatrician: the opportunity to provide children with anticipatory guidance as well as their parents who lack any awareness of health care practices with pertinent information was of particular importance for me.

I must say that in my work, I express myself primarily as an attentive and caring medical, who is always ready to respect and understand patients regardless of their nationality, culture and religion. More than ____ years, I have been doing my best to help people, in particular, immigrants having little educational opportunities, to receive much useful and valuable information to maintain their health. I do enjoy helping children to recover though each case represents different challenges. I can humbly say that through every individual experience and interaction with patients, I am becoming a better human being. A particular case remains in my mind that is the case of a child diagnosed with hepatoblastoma. I was directly involved in his treatment and helped not only the child by providing supportive treatment for his symptoms, but also his parents by giving information and psychological assistance when explaining the features of the disease and inspiring optimism and faith in the successful treatment.

I am confident that I can bring a large number of benefits to children and their parents as a pediatrician since this profession is particularly important for me. I see a great social importance, uniqueness and high demand in it. I believe that pediatrician is not only a medical, but also a psychologist, whose task is to help little patients recover as quickly as possible. In addition, a pediatrician is the educator, who has every opportunity to provide parents with valuable information given the fact that often they lack full knowledge of the various childhood diseases. I am aware of the complexity of the work, but without it, I cannot imagine my life because children are my life. I see my mission in treating them, a mission that can give me great pleasure, a mission that can make me the happiest man in the world!
