For me, values are not merely things which determine what is important or not, right or wrong, but things which also inspire me. I believe that values mean a lot to me because they serve as motivators which make me move forward. For example, they make me choose career development and give up some things in family life because of that. They make me pursue a job which is connected top people and communication, and my values help me deal with stress, get promotions, and achieve my goals.

I was the most proud when I organized a charity event for children with special needs, and it was when my friends and family were the most proud of me, too. I felt proud because I knew that the thing I organized was very valuable for the children, and they enjoyed their time, so their happiness was the biggest "thank-you" in my life. I am proud of many personal achievements; for example, when I was able to deal with a problem I struggled for a while, or when I learned something in a new area.

I was very fulfilled when I got my first salary. I fulfilled my need to be independent and take care of myself. My life got meaning because I realized that it was time when I no longer took money from my parents, but I could support both myself and them in return. I was also fulfilled realizing that the world of new opportunities opened up for me. It was the same when I joined college.

My top qualities are: 1. Boldness. 2. Continuous Improvement. 3. Self-Actualization. 4. Being the Best. 5.Leadership. 6. Enjoyment. 7. Enthusiasm. 8. Achievement. 9.Family-orientedness. 10. Belonging. It was difficult at first, but then, I figured out what truly mattered for me. My top three values are connected with my personal development and confidence within me as well as the ability to try something new fearlessly. That is why I am proud of these values. I would share these values with people easily; and they also represent what I stand for so I would not be scared or reluctant to defend them in any situation.
